SILVER FLAIR HITS NEVADA; MINES REOPEN

Abandoned Properties Are Likely to be Found Producing Soon

RENO, Nevada, Dec. 26.—In a hundred camps there was activity today as Nevada has not known since Jim Butler's runaway burro led him to the rich silver deposits. Thomas J. Mackay, who started the wild series of events climaxed by the silver strike, has been able to do so in the last year since Mackay, Fair, Gold and O'Brien were killed. Nothing like a boom was apparent in the silver mines. Under way to reopen abandoned silver properties and develop huge ore bodies that have lain idle three many months for want of a suitable owner.

GIRL, 16, KILLED BENEATH WHEELS OF FARM TRUCK

Thomas Jackson, Bremer farmer, was arrested in police court on a manslaughter charge Tuesday morning before Magistrate Col. George R. McLeod.

JOCKEYED

Hon. H. H. Stevens got back from England just in time to hear that the United States had sent us its "best" wheat, a variety of wheat 15 per cent higher yielding power, and thus secured a lead in the competition for trade in the silver countries in the West.

This must be far from welcome news to the Minister of Trade and Commerce. Canada would not have been so jockeyed out of the principal markets for wheat as it has been treated with the respect it deserved two years ago. Mr. Stevens, it will be recalled, made a series of public addresses at that time urging that Canada at once revolutionize its wheat as a metal, give it an exchange value that would mean something, and thereby get first place in bidding for trade. He said that he was apparently told to stop urging what his colleagues had no intention of doing, and the speeches ended suddenly.

The best that can now be hoped is that Parliament will at the coming session follow the lead of Washington, and thereby give Canadian traders a chance to pick up what business in the Far East their enterprising neighbors will not have by that time corroded. There is no assurance, and so far no suggestion, that the Government will even ask parliament to do that.

HEDGING OPERATIONS

Hopeful Canadian exporters are still making "test" shipments to find out the mode of procedure by which they can ship wheat through United States ports without losing the benefits of a preferential tariff which Canadian wheat is entitled to reaching a British port.

A London dispatch says customs officials there refused to either deny or confirm a report that the latest shipment via New York had been allowed the preference because of having been sold to a British importer before it left Canada. The agreement specifically states that the preference is only allowed on wheat shipped through Canadian channels, the silence of the officials rather suggests that they construed the clause to mean wheat shipped to Canada.

Loss of the privilege of shipping through United States ports imposed a restriction on the Government of our wheat to Britain, a restriction which may have Canadian authorities as a favor to Canadian ports, and in any case was accepted by them. Necessarily the restriction tended to limit the export of wheat in Canada, to the extent to which it increases transportation costs, hinders shipment, interferes with prompt and continuous delivery.

If British officials are standing on a strict word-for-word interpretation of the restrictive clause, that is, that Canadian wheat must be grown and shipped, but Canada is not in a good position to protest or complain. Canadian authorities have blocked on wheat shipped through Canadian channels, the silence of the officials rather suggests that they construed the clause to mean wheat shipped to Canada.

Having done this, Canada is not entitled to make any official objection if British authorities apply the same rule in deciding the shipment under Canadian conditions. Canadian authorities have blocked on wheat shipped through Canadian channels, the silence of the officials rather suggests that they construed the clause to mean wheat shipped to Canada.

The Enquire Trust reference, it was loudly boasted, would not succeed to "horse trade" it did worse, so far as the Canadian-British agreement is concerned. A bargain was struck, and both parties have agreed to abide by it, finding a way to circumvent the plain terms: Canada thus far having got much the better of the competitive dispute.

WHAT COULD BE DONE

The regional committee of the Canadian Construction Council has drawn up an impressive list of public improvements which could be made in Edmonton, and its counterparts in northern Alberta, if the money were available at a low rate of interest.

Edmonton, it is pointed out, could profitably use $300,000 in such works as grading and travelling streets, putting down paving, permanent walks and curbing, extending the water and sewer systems, widening bridges, and highways, improving parks, modernizing the power plant and telephone system, and repairing the buildings owned by the city, and making the public school board, without too far anticiputing future needs, could build two high school buildings, a public school, a technical school, at a cost of $753,000.

With nothing said about highway construction, the Provincial Government could spend $1,100,000 in capital investments in central and northern Alberta, which will have to be made in the reasonably near future, in the erection of a sanatorium, a mentally deficient children's hospital, a hospital for blind and infirm people, and a nurses' home at the University hospital.

The Dominion Government, in improving the northern waterways and building R.M.P. barracks at Edmonton and other points, could spend $914,000, which will have to be spent in any case over a term of years.

A civic auditorium in Edmonton, if undertaken, would cost an additional $800,000.

The launching of a public works construction program of this kind with an expenditure of $3,000,000 by the city, and a total of $4,853,000 in central and northern Alberta, would solve the unemployment problem in this section of Canada. The stimulus given to business would be the equivalent of private funds, probably to a far larger amount. The relief lines would melt away, the "soup kitchens" and relief camps would close, and the unemployed would be spending wages instead of "dole," debt would be paid, buying would increase, property values return, and the whole community throbbing with new life.

The Dominion Government should make this program possible by issuing the necessary amount of money, lend the province and the city what they need at a low interest rate, and high enough to cover the cost of the operation, and wipe out the debt by collecting a sinking fund to extinguish the loans in a proper period of time.

There is little to encourage a hope that the present Dominion Government will do anything of the kind. But private funds, which would be done if the practice of financing public works at actual cost was adopted, and that is the only way in which it could be done, as it is usually will not do distant future Canadian taxpayers are getting very, very tired of being prevented by their own credit-worthiness from doing what they would like to do, and of being made to support men in idleness because they cannot pay the toll demanded for the money to set them at work with wages.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COOPER

Here's hoping you managed to survive the Christmas festivities with appetite unquenched and resolution undimmed. Christmas is the first milestone through the long prairie winter. Charitable agencies sue to it that as far as possible, every poor family was well supplied for their Christmas dinner. The trouble is that a good dinner on December 25 is well digested by January 1, and the poor family is cold days before the summer of 1934 comes.

Hope, that springs eternal in the human breast, still survives the leaden disappointment of the last three years. Will 1934 show a relief from the anguish and idleness, the loss of homes, the disappearance of work and the filtering of the population, that marked the majority in the year nearly approaching its close?

Will some find serendipitous hope in the fact that Japanese publishers are shipping fiction in the Japanese language, to the Japanese majority in the Hawaiian Islands, describing the course of a United States-Japan war of 1936. The story is entitled "Putte and the Japanese in America and Japan." It is written by Lt. Commander Kyosuke Fukunaga late of the Japanese Navy. It pictures the Japanese fleet closing in on the island of Oahu, the destruction of the American fleet coming to the rescue of the Hawaiian Islands, and the Japanese capture of Hawaii.

The illustrations include the American aircraft carrier Saratoga, a warship in the Panama Canal, the United States fleet, the Japanese fleet in combat and the execution of a "traitor." The U.S. Customs officers at Honolulu have confiscated the shipment of naganagas and pamphlets. U.S. military planes are shown attacking the Japanese fleet. The Japanese are amazed at the accurate descriptions of American cruisers and battleships, the description of guns and armaments and types, displayed by the author.

By the agency of forced-drafting birds, the Japanese in 1936, have outfitted all other races in the U.S. possession. Look across the Atlantic or across the Pacific. The world is yet a long way from achieving the "peace on earth, good will to men" we heard so much about over the week-end.

Any man who has been in the Great War and heard the British Tommies sing will admit that the chap who wrote "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" helped to win the war.

The French Government conferred the Legion of Honor on Camille Robert who wrote "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." The song was written by the Frenchman, who wrote "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," which enjoyed ten times the fame of "La Marseillaise" didn't even get the O.B.E. A Frenchman has written a new version to make amends for official oversight by raising a fund to present to the needy author.

John A. Macdonald used to go to a fish shop in the day time and work as a ham actor at nights who wrote "Tipperary," the war song that eclipsed even "La Marseillaise." It was sung on every front and translated into every language, including the Scandinavian and the Chinese. One scholarly giant at the coast did not let it in. He said it was "too vulgar." "Tipperary" into Latin for the benefit of the troops with classical education.

Harry Williams, whose parents ran a roadside pub in Warwickshire, and whose name appears as co-author on the published version of the song, is said to have acquired a fame that was not wholly undeserved.

Williams died in 1924. On his grave near Kenilworth is a brass tablet reading: "In Remembrance of Harry Williams, who translated the famous 'The World's Most Famous Song' 'It's a Long Way to Tipperary' into Latin for the benefit of the troops with classical education."

On his grave is also inscribed as: "Author of 'It's a Long Way to Tipperary'."

"Give me the making of the Song of a Nation."

And let who will make its Laws."

The committee which is at work on the fund for the building of a Canadian National Museum as the actual writing of the words and music is concerned, Judge was the sole author. At the time he wrote the song, Williams had no money to get it published. Williams had lent him money to help him in the fish shop. An agreement was arrived at between the two men, that Williams was to be paid a share of the profits of the song—if it. In fulfillment of this arrangement, Williams' name appeared as co-author on the printed copies.

Money, as we well know, has sacred rights above all other obligations for interest payment. Williams can't complain that he wasn't well repaid for his loan.

"Mr. Statist," writing to a coast paper, complained that the program of the Canadian National Museum was putting on from the north.

He says that one recent evening he tuned in to the "Call of the North" program from an Edmonton station, and was surprised that the call of the North proved to be "Dixie." Williams had said to him, "I had a hunch that 'a chuckle-headed chickadee from Chilliwack.' It was in Edmonton when it's been belted, and a wild birdie sang it for his home song. I was in Dixie, I do." He complains that the second number wasn't topical, either. It was something from "Carmen." Does he think the Edmontonites go around on snowshoes and dog sleighs, and that "Jingle Bells" would be more appropriate than "Carmen."

I hope he listens in on the Moose Jaw program. There's a topical contribution for any town. They have a local station, arrests for bootlegging, and a chap found sleeping on the City Hall steps being fined for "impersonating a policeman."

The opposition to inflation comes from the creditor classes who have fattened at the expense of the debtor classes throughout the depression. It is 146,000 that the debtor classes have an innings. The most rabid opponents of an adjustment of debt burdens are those who are seeking the protection of stock splitting, milk cutting, and over capitalizing reduced industry to its present extremity, in order that they may be able to hide their diminished heads—Toronto Star.

Dried Fruits

By DOCTOR FRANK MCCOY

Ever so often, I find an old, familiar food cropping up in the news of the food world and making a new name for itself. One of the foods which is now making a name for itself, for example, the dried prune, together with dried apricots and peaches, has lately been found to have a particular value as a blood-builder. This virtue is also shared by canned and fresh pineapple and it is also present in apricots and peaches in their fresh and canned form. Part of the blood-building effect comes from the presence of iron and copper, found in the above foods.

More news about prunes. Dr. F. McCoy is that prune juice is now for sale in glasses. Strained prune, or prune whip, is now on the market and is used in preparing special desserts when whipped cream or beaten egg whites are added. I know that many of you will be glad to find you can now buy prunes and apricots which are dried, meaning that they have undergone a process to make them more tender, so that they cook without soaking, in from thirty to forty minutes.

I recommend dried fruits in the diet and such articles as prunes, figs, raisins, peaches and apricots are wholesome when prepared properly. They are natural foods and are rich in the mineral elements needed for health and vigor. As they are alkaline forming foods, they help to correct acidities. Prunes are also an acid and tend to increase the acidity of the liquid waste from the kidneys; they are not classed as enervating, although they do contain an abundance of the alkaline minerals.

Dried fruits have a mild laxative quality and if you wish to increase their laxative property I would suggest that you eat them with water to the water in which they are soaked overnight. In the morning, cook the fruits in the same water, along with the leaves. I believe that many of you will be glad to find you will find this the least harmful form. However, do not continue to use the senna any longer than necessary.

In dried fruits, you get good value for your money. When you buy any food the only part which does you any good is the part you actually eat. Many of the dried fruits, such as raisins, apricots and peaches are used in their entirety and you get the full benefit of what you eat. Many of the dried fruits are dried, thrown away in the seeds and pits. During the drying process, much of the water is removed so that you pay for very little water. Water value is added when the fruits are dried; they increase in quantity, so that they end up with more food than you started with. Another reason why dried fruits are so good is that they keep for some time.

Dried fruits are fully ripened and are ex-acting in fruit sugar. They contain from fifty to seventy per cent of sugar. Since they are so sweet, I would suggest that you use only about five prunes each day, as one who eats from ten to fifteen prunes a day will get an excess of sugar, which his body probably would not need.

When these sweet fruits are mixed with starches, fatulence may result; the best way to combine dried fruits is to take them stewed for breakfast with an egg and a dehydrated starch such as farina to eat. They may be combined with meat and vegetables for dinner. Another good combination which makes a satisfactory meal is dates and raisins, or raisins and when mixed with celery, make a delicious stuffing for turkey or chicken.

On his grave is also inscribed as: "Author of 'It's a Long Way to Tipperary'."

This article will come to you during Christmas week, when many of you will be buying dried fruits for the holidays. I have given you, I am sure you will find them helpful and wholesome.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: Reader asks: "May fruit or ice cream be held in the stomach without interfering with digestion?"

ANSWER: Fruit and ice cream must both be considered real food and should therefore be used in place of a meal, or may be used in addition to a meal if combined with those foods with which they are harmonious.

QUESTION: C. W. S. writes: "Will you please tell me what is the cause of a catarract on the left eye? Haven't had it long. Would like to know of there is an absolute cure without an operation. Am fifty-five years old."

Dr. Frank McCoy's reply: "The best way to Health gives you the mechanics of health in plain English. It is a book that will tell you a lot of things you don't know. A limited supply is on hand at the Bulletin. A copy will be sent to you if you send me a note."

If December 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you this date are from 7:30 to 8:45 a.m., from 3 to 4 p.m. and from 7:30 to 8:45 p.m. The danger periods are from 10:40 a.m. to 12 noon, from 1:15 to 2 p.m. and from 10 to 11 p.m.

You will feel most trusting on this date and unless careful you will be very badly "taken in."

The child born on December 27 will not be the kind to sit and whine when things go wrong or when he is left to his own devices. He will be born on December 27 will invariably strive to do the right thing and to do your work well. On occasions you go "haywire" on something that you do and when you do work or make a mistake, you are not quick to admit it. You want so very much to be liked by those you are in contact with, particularly hard for you to stumble and fall, and particularly hard for you to be reproached himself severely if you are inclined to worry over your failures.

On This Date

A Day in Canadian History—

By FRED WILLIAMS

On this date, in 1883, there was an amusing dynamite scare at Rideau Hall, Ottawa. The Marquis of Lansdowne, who had assumed office as Governor-General two months before, was both in Ireland and in the United States, the target for much abuse by active sympathizers with the Fenian cause. He was regarded as one of the "racketing landlords" and no sooner had his appointment to Ottawa been announced than the Clan Na Gael issued warnings that his life in Canada would be in danger.

The Governor and his family were closely guarded; strict precautions were taken that no suspicious strangers approached Rideau Hall, special detectives were kept busy. British had, however, a most efficient secret service in New York, which was well informed of Fenian plots and boasts. Sir John A. Macdonald was greatly relieved when he learned that for once his anxiety was modified when he received a letter from Lord Lansdowne telling him that as result of warning from New York that the Fenians intended to send an infernal machine through the mails, "all strange parcels shall be treated respectfully."

There were many more scares at Rideau Hall and at the Governor's residence. Lord Lansdowne's stay in Canada, but the vigilance of the Dominion Police, under Colonel A. P. Sherwood, saw to it that there came no unfortunate sequel. A good deal of money was paid out of the secret service fund in those five years.

JUST MARKED UP

Lord Lansdowne's assertion that shipping industry has had no benefit from the Ottawa agreements and that there has been no marked increase in empire trade is interesting. Shipowners of Canadian flags trade by quantity rather than value. It is the amount of goods they have to put in their ships that counts. Canada's trade figures show greater trade with Britain but in view of Lord Lansdowne's statement the question arises as to whether or those Canadian figures really mean an increase or do they just represent an increase in the number of ships.

There is one point, however, which is worth immediate attention. Premier Brownie insists that the capital of the proposed bank be owned exclusively by the government, private capital being debared from holding any shares. In this Mr. Brownie will have the wholehearted support of the majority of those outside of banking circles who have been interested in the formation of the new bank, which will doubtless date from the start, that if private capital is permitted to hold shares in the central bank, it will be only a very few years before the bank will come under the control of the existing banks. At the end of the Dominion and become just what people are afraid of, "a bankers' bank."—Vergerville Observer.

ARMY OFFICERS TO BE FREED BEFORE LONG

Released Prisoners Were Captured at Battle Of Atares

HAVANA, Dec. 26.—More than 300 Cuban prisoners taken at the battle of Atares early last month were liberated early yesterday, shortly after they had threatened to go on a hunger strike.

In addition, the report for the liberation of 400 former army officers, imprisoned at the battle of the Hotel Nacional, Oct. 2, was partially carried out when 32 army doctors, dentists and veterinarians were given their freedom at Principe, further.

Decision regarding the liberty of the remaining 372 was still in the hands of Colonel Fulgencio Batista and his military legal staff.

Col. Batista gave a dinner at Camp Columbia attended by Spanish Ambassador Lopez Ferrer, high Cuban government officials and a group of officers from the United States battleship "Wyoming" anchored in Havana harbor.

They were said for Cuban-American and Spanish-Cuban cordiality, as the American officers were greeted by the cheers of Cuban officers and men.

Political observers predicted a partial amnesty of the Cuban officers. The resignations of secretary of the treasury, Ramon Capablanca, secretary of sanitation, Carlos Finlay and secretary of public works, Gustavo Morera, were expected to be in the hands of President Gerardo San Martin.

INTIMATE GLIMPSES AND INSIDE STUFF ON THE MOVIE COLONY

By DAN THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 26.—After standing open for some months, "the little red schoolhouse" on the Universal lot is open for business again—and with only one student.

Neysa Nourse, 14 and red-haired, is learning all about languages, history, and such in the little two-room building, at the same time she is learning the art of acting on one of the nearby stages.

According to California law, school children under 18 are limited to eight working hours a day. Of these, three must be devoted to schooling. Hence the studio schoolhouse is kept open only when there are children on the lot. And until young Miss Nourse came along, Universal happened to be devoid of youngsters.

It's unusual, however, to find the little girl in a studio schoolroom. One usually can find at least a handful, and since musical productions have brought so many young chorists to the screen, the classroom has had to be enlarged.

Miss Nourse was signed to a long-term contract by Universal as a result of a recent appearance on the stage in Hollywood. And studio executives were more than usually interested about her prospects.

However, even though she may wish to stand out, she still will be a number one student in the "little red schoolhouse" for the next four years.

WHO WANTS A SCOTTIE?

And now Herbert Mundin rises to remark that he has to part with some of his Scottie puppies, the living room rug just enough enough to make him feel.

MA ROGERS, PRODUCERS

Ginger Rogers no longer is going to be the only broad-winner in her class. Ginger's mate, Miss Ma Rogers, has become a producer of little theatre plays. The "little theatre" around her corner, has been transformed into the Hollywood Theatre and there Mrs. Rogers will stage her plays, with children as the principal of the younger screen players.

All the studios have signified their desire to cooperate, as they feel it will be good training for their youngsters and at the same time.

READY FOR THE EVENT

GHOST TRAIN AT NEW EMPIRE SHOW THRILL

Opening Nighters Show Keen Appreciation Of Performance

Curse and bewitchment are happily combined in "The Ghost Train" which the British Guild Players presented at the New Empire theatre on Monday and will continue to play for the rest of this week. Two holiday audiences gave their indelible stamp of approval to the production.

Up until now, the British Guild Players have presented straight comedy. True it has been one of the finest sort of the noble sort, and of the witty sort. But here is a play with more than a touch of the melodramatic to intrigue the sensibilities. There is plenty of comedy of a light-hearted type. Yet the main theme of the story is a tragedy of the most thrilling. There is mystery aplenty.

APPARENT SOLUTION First one apparent solution to a baffling problem is presented by the author for consideration and then there is another equally plausible working out presented.

Of course, in the end, there is one presented that no one thought of. "The Ghost Train" the climax comes with a pretty moving story and with telling details.

It is a mystery story it would be manifestly unfair to the company, and to those who have not yet attended the production, but who contemplate doing so, to disclose the story and its ending. Let it suffice to state that it is an interesting story, retaining the interest until the end and with a climax that would do credit to such an exponent of the unexpected ending of O. Henry.

The company showed up to splendid advantage. It is evidently a matter of the management to give each member of the company every opportunity to display ability. This week Margaret Nino is afforded the opportunity to show her acting.

DIFFICULT ASSIGNMENT

Cart Julia Price has a most difficult assignment and that is to carry it through with complete success is indeed a tribute to her consummate skill. Her characterization of the mentally unbalanced girl and then transforming into a type, left little to be desired.

David Clyde gave ample demonstration of his ability. His transformation from one character to another was deeply impressive and at all times convincing.

Gaby Fay, while leaving the major honors to Miss Nino, gave a scintillating performance as Mrs. Bourne and especially when she takes a "spoon" of brandy for health.

DEATH REMOVES COAST ACTRESS

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 26.—The death from a sudden heart attack of Mrs. Blanche Frederick Campbell, stage manager for the Henry Duffey productions, to a Christmas service in General Grant Memorial park.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., Mrs. Campbell played on the New York stage and in stock and repertory companies. Her most famous role of both stage and screen was that of Mrs. Davidson "Rita" She played with Gloria Swanson in the film "The Sign of the Cross" after acting the role for four years on the stage.

RIALTO

Directed by Thomas Bentley, and adapted by H. F. Stanley, the story of "My Wife's Mother," which is showing at the Rialto theatre to day, evokes round the production of a young man who, on the night before his wedding, is embarrassed by the arrival of a strange young woman clad in very wet pajamas who insists upon sheltering from the storm in his house. Gene's entrance into the picture, however, leads to hilarious complications, considerably heightened by the arrival of the fair intruder's vengeful husband.

"My Wife's Mother" in addition to once again presenting Gene in a role eminently suited to his own particular brand of comedy also introduces to the screen Amy Veness in another mother-in-law role.

The classical continental star, Camilla Horn, will be seen playing opposite Gene in "The Merry Mother," which is showing at the Rialto theatre to day.

Capitol

RKO-Radio Pictures' new comedy dramatization of "Little Women," Louisa A. Alcott's immortal story of the life, laughter and tears of a New England family in the Sixties, which delighted large crowds at the Capitol theatre over the holiday week-end, wins a high place in the hearts of the audience.

Carrigan Sextet Are Victors Over South Siders 7-2

By JACK DEARIN
An unfortunate case, the injury to Ken Berford in the Carrigan Sextet, was a blow to the Carrigan squad and gave Edmonton Athletic Club a further hold on first place as they triumphed by a 7-2 score over their third straight victory in the Junior Hockey League.

The injury to Berford was a hard blow to the South Siders. It was taken out of the game when he suffered a deep cut under his eye. The injury resulted from a scuffle before the goal mouth, after Berford had turned back a threatening E.A.C. attack. The work of Berford's teammates minutes was brilliant, he stopped many attacks and turned back many barrages of flying shots.

PLAY GOOD GAME
Although the South Siders lost by a large margin, the score was no indication of the play. Many were the threatening attacks of the Carrigan and only unlucky breaks prevented them from scoring on a number of occasions.

The services of Ken Campbell, smart skating forward were also missed by the South Siders. Campbell was unable to play owing to illness.

Goalie took up good tending duties for the South Side after Berford's injury. This caused the change in South Siders' tactics, regarding that club's team play.

Andy Maloney and Max Colville, who were the mainstay of the Carrigan group, were the only players who were not injured in the game. Maloney scored the first goal, he broke up a South Side attack at midline, broke away and scored, he picked up the disc and gave Carrigan the puck just before the goal on a back hand shot.

GETS SECOND GOAL
Maloney scored his second mark, in the middle of the game, as he came from the Carrigan line, when he passed the disc out from the Carrigan line, and scored from centre ice into South Side's goal.

On a smart individual play, Neal Colville sent the club quad into a goal, when he took a hard drive on a loose puck, scored South Side's second goal.

A wild scoring spree occurred in the final period, with the Carrigan brothers featuring in the play. The Carrigan brothers, Neal Colville, scored the fifth E.A.C. mark, when he took a hard drive on a loose puck, scored South Side's second goal.

Brother Neal scored his second mark in this game, when he took a hard drive on a loose puck, scored South Side's second goal.

Here is G. J. Jenkins, former Montreal soccer star, arriving in Glasgow where he is scheduled to play goal for the famous Glasgow Rangers. Jenkins enjoyed no little fame as goalie for the Montreal C.N.R.

Willard's name brings back memories of old fighting days. Jenkins never was a popular heavyweight, and never was liked as much as the big boy in red to have taken one of his best Sunday punches at the man. Anyway, Jenkins was arrested and charged with assault on a police officer.
